QUESTION FIVE

200 years ago, girls learned how to play the piano, but not the violin.

Yes

or

No

QUESTION FIVE

Yes! 200 years ago, girls learned how to play the piano, but not the violin. It was not considered "lady like" for girls to raise their arms, so they were not allowed to play the violin. However, live music was the only way people could listen to music back then, so it was important that girls learn how to play the piano so they could entertain their guests and enjoy music.

Yes

or

No

QUESTION SEVEN

This map was sewn by hand.
A 12-year-old girl made it to show off her skills in sewing and her knowledge of geography and history (see George Washington in the lower left corner?)

200 years ago, people had to make and mend their own clothes so sewing was an important skill to have.
Sewing was also thought to strengthen girls' hands for writing.
